

Intersection of 4th and Harnett, November, 1898. Hayden wrote that S. Hill Terry, Theodore Curtis, and Sam Matthews fired shotguns at the black men before the crowd of whites fired a “fusillade” of shots at this intersection, marking the first deaths at this spot.

Image courtesy of the New Hanover County Public Library

Newly discovered image of the intersection at Fourth and Harnett Streets. The view in this image is from the same angle as the previous photo but shows more of Harnett Street. Some of the men wounded in shooting at Fourth and Harnett ran into some of the homes just east of the corner store.

Image Courtesy of the New Hanover County Public Library.